FOREWORD

The collection of Chinese and Japanese art objects offered in this sale is an interesting one, filled with a variety of articles that will appeal to every art lover, not only as collectors' pieces but also as delightful gifts.

As an artist and collector of Oriental art objects for more than twenty years, it has been my constant effort to form a collection of such objects as are most sought for by the public for their practical as well as artistic value. With this view in mind I recently made an extensive trip to the Orient through Europe, the major portion of the present collection was gathered then, some of the pieces being made especially to my order and executed from my designs.

The collection of jade flower plants is rich and distinctive, the flowers wrought from the choicest stones and arranged with grace and skill in appropriate pots. There are charming lily plants and grape gardens from China, rare pieces, displaying the delicate taste and originality of the artists, together with two miniature aquariums.

A number of fine table screens, large and small, executed in jade, lapis lazuli, etc., and beautifully adorned with stones of contrasting color, are enchanting ornaments for the home. Those mounted as lamps with metal reflectors are exceptionally interesting. There are other lamps with bases of jade flowers, rose-quartz figures and vases. The group of carnelian rooster-family lamps is particularly rare.

The Chinese green jades are very fine and important. Fine green jades are so scarce in China that the dealers are not anxious to dispose of them. Excellent examples in this collection are the jade beads and the emerald-green finger ring and the superb and translucent carved brooch pin, set in white gold and platinum mounting with diamonds. All the brooch pins and the rings have genuine gold settings unless otherwise noted in the catalogue.

The pendants and beads are specially mounted with pure Japanese silk cords to match the color of the stones and with popular Chinese knots. The elaborate knots with silk cords and long silk tassels are used also on the jade and ivory girdles.

The delicate carving of the Japanese artists is well illustrated in the miniature menagerie (number 283) composed of thirty life-like animals, and the most important of this collection is the group of carved old ivory statuettes of two sublime standing ladies.

Quite different from others, but with more gaiety of color, are the fine Japanese silk crêpe Kimonos, with several smaller ones for children, all prepared ready for wear. There are a few old court ladies' robes in more sober shades. The antique Japanese brocade in fair and dignified patina is adaptable for wall hangings and table and piano covers.

Regarding the collection, I desire to have it remembered that all of the stones and other objects in this sale are just as they are described in the catalogue.
